The Situation: Food Insecurity

Problem: Millions of Americans, including many Black families and children across the Southern Area, experience food insecurity despite living in communities with abundant resources.

- Black households experience food insecurity at much higher rates than many other groups, with nearly 1 in 4 households (24.4%) struggling to consistently access enough food.
- About 1 in 4 Black children live in households facing food insecurity, making them twice as likely to experience hunger as White children.
- These disparities are rooted in long-standing inequities, including systemic racism and economic barriers that affect access to stable employment, income, and affordable, nutritious food.

Why it Matters: Food insecurity affects health, education, economic stability, and quality of life. It disproportionately impacts communities The Links has long served.

Our Opportunity: Through education, advocacy, service, and the arts, The Links can help raise awareness while engaging young people as creative advocates for change.

Nourish Every Neighbor

Integrating with our Southern Area Focus: The Emerald Plate

In support of National Trends and Services' vision to eliminate disparities by reducing barriers to services through advocacy, education, and service, The Emerald Plate is the Southern Area's food insecurity initiative.

Through education, community engagement, and strategic partnerships, the initiative seeks to address the systemic causes of food insecurity while expanding equitable access to nutritious food for those most affected, including BIPOC communities, HBCU students, low-income families, veterans, individuals experiencing homelessness, and other underserved populations.

The Case for Poster Art

Nourish Every Neighbor

- Art has long been one of society's most powerful tools for education, advocacy, and social change.
- Poster art has inspired public action around civil rights, public health, voting, environmental stewardship, and community engagement.
- The Southern Area Poster Art Contest invites students to create original visual artwork that interprets the theme Nourish Every Neighbor, illustrating how individuals and communities can respond to hunger with care, dignity, and social responsibility.

- The Southern Area (SA) Poster Art Contest is a Classics Through the Ages (CTA) Creative Competition and serves as a supporting activity within National Arts programming.
- Chapters can implement the Southern Area Poster Art Contest as:
 - An activity within a Tier 1 or Tier 2 CTA program
 - An arts activity supporting one or more of its other chapter programs implementing a National Program or National Initiative
 - A stand-alone activity that is not eligible to be submitted in the chapter program report due Feb. 1st
